Feedback from the students on the first survey was that the first two weeks of the semester were the most difficult for them. They felt that the workload was too high and that the pace was too fast. They also felt that the content was too theoretical and that they needed more practical examples. They also felt that the assignments were too long and that they needed more time to complete them. They also felt that the lectures were too long and that they needed more interactive activities. They also felt that the assessments were too difficult and that they needed more support. They also felt that the overall experience was not as good as they had hoped for.

Most comments were against the way the workload was managed at the beginning of the semester. They felt that the assignments were too long and that they needed more time to complete them. They also felt that the lectures were too long and that they needed more interactive activities. They also felt that the assessments were too difficult and that they needed more support. They also felt that the overall experience was not as good as they had hoped for.
