

It is a state that is considered "likely" for President Barack Obama based on the Real Clear Politics' (RCP) projection of the Electoral College map but can Chris Christie make a difference?

Despite governed by a Republican governor, New Jersey polls seem to give Obama up to a double-digit lead over former Massachusetts Governor Mitt Romney.

Quinnipiac's polling data, dating from Oct. 10 to Oct. 14, showed Obama with an eight percent lead. With a margin of error of 2.7 percent, Obama received 51 percent to Romney's 43 percent.

"It's still a blue state and the color didn't fade after the first presidential debate," said Quinnipiac University Polling Institute Director Maurice Carroll. "President Barack Obama's lead among likely voters is still in the single digits. Not overwhelming, but it's enough and doesn't seem to be changing."
