Galloway Township, NJ – Jobs and property taxes are the top priorities of voters in the fall elections, according to a statewide poll released by the Stockton Polling Institute today.

Nearly one out of four (24 percent) respondents identified jobs as “the most important issue facing New Jersey.” Eighteen percent identified property taxes as the top issue and 11 percent said taxes in general matter the most. Nine percent named the economy.

K-12 education was cited by 7 percent [7 per] 10.5 (and) 6.5 (a) 108.9 (ae) 10.7 t) 6.73.5 (

“Pocketbook issues are on the minds of voters this election,” said Daniel J. Douglas, director of the Hughes Center. “People are concerned about jobs, taxes, and the economy.”

Still, a majority of 60 percent think the state is going in the right direction, while 27 percent believe the state has gotten off on the wrong track. Fourteen percent are unsure.
