

Stockton Poll: N.J. Residents See Rise in Mental Health Issues Since Pandemic

For immediate release:

April 29, 2022

Galloway, N.J. - A majority of New Jersey adults or someone they know has experienced mental health problems, and the problems have gotten worse during the coronavirus pandemic, according to a Stockton University Poll on public health and other issues

(13% each), followed by property tax reduction (12%) and housing and tax rebates (both at 9%)

- And finally, 52% supported facial recognition technology being used by

Stockton University, which is celebrating its 50