Galloway Township, NJ- One day just isn't enough to celebrate our planet, so The Richard Stockton College of New Jersey is hosting an Earth Week celebration the same week as Earth Day.

Stockton Action Volunteers for the Environment (SAVE), the oldest student-run environmental organization in the state, is hosting a series of events from Monday, April 22 through Friday, April 26.

Monday, April 22

"Chasing Ice" 12 p.m., Board of Trustees Room

Environmental photographer James Balog headed to the Arctic on a National Geographic assignment to capture images that illustrate climate change. With cutting-edge time-lapse cameras, a multi-year record of the world's changing glaciers was documented.

"A Fierce Green Fire" 2:30 p.m., Board of Trustees Room

This film is the first big-picture exploration of the environmental movement – grassroots and global activism spanning 50 years, from conservation to climate change.

Biodiversity Nature Walk, 4:45 p.m.

Dr. Jamie Cromartie, associate professor of Entomology, will lead a walk along Lake Fred to point out the biodiversity found on campus. Participants will meet at the F-Wing Atrium outside the Library. Cameras are welcome.
