

-Continued from Page 1-

Dahme now lives in Flemington, N.J. She spends much of her time speaking to students and adults about her experiences during World War II. She annually leads New Jersey teachers on a tour of Holocaust sites.

le from ComteQ Publishing, a company specializing in Holocaust memoirs and Holocaust education. For more information, click here.

on is to promote greater awareness, sensitivity and understanding for Holocaust education. The center memorializes the victims of the Holocaust by paying tribute to survivors, liberators and eyewitnesses, and serves as a repository for Holocaust materials.

Photo Caption: Maud Dahme with her grandson, Hogan Laskey, a student at Stockton University. Photo by Maryjane Briant.

#