

STOCKTON COLLEGE

THE RICHARD STOCKTON COLLEGE OF NEW JERSEY

Stockton Student, Rio Grande Resident Hanna Lomonaco Wins Best Paper Award

Three Stockton Students Participated in the NJ Women and Gender Studies Consortium's Undergraduate Research Colloquium

For Immediate Release

Wednesday, April 21, 2010

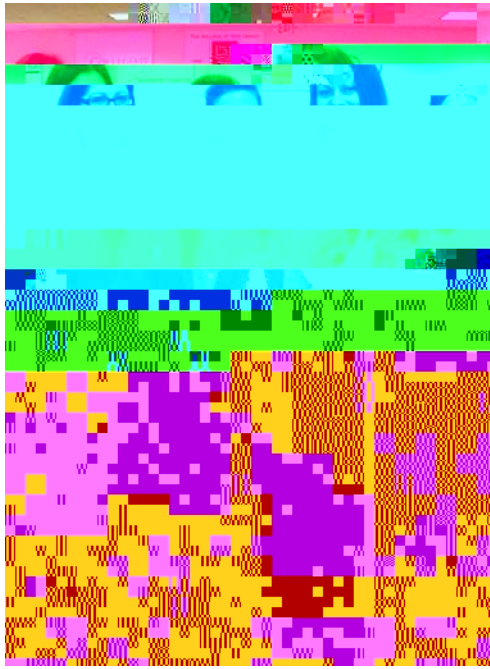

Contact: Tim Kelly
Susan Allen
Office of Public Relations
Gallow0.low0.s

Office of Public Relations
17NJ1621 April 11, 2010
Richa
Jersey.

Stockton is a member organization of the National Women and Gender Studies Consortium. Deborah Gussman, associate professor of history, and the following Stockton students represented the College at the colloquium:

- x Danielle Nobilucci, a literature major, won the award for her paper, "Autonomy in Wharton's The Story of an Hour."
- x Hanna Lomonaco, a literature major, won the award for her paper, "The Story of an Hour."
- x Donaco's paper which was about the role of women in the American West.

thesis she wrote on Toni Morrison and Julia Alvarez –won one

From left, Deborah Gussman, associate professor of American literature, Sharon Musher, assistant professor of history, Hanna Lomonaco, and Nancy Stack Lomonaco, Hanna's mother-in-law.

#