Galloway Township, NJ- Stockton's Manahawkin Instructional Site is hosting a transfer admissions day for students interested in transferring to The Richard Stockton College of New Jersey.

The daylong event will take place Monday, March 25, 2013, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., at Stockton's Manahawkin site, located at 712 East Bay Avenue.

Interested students walk in and will have the opportunity to meet one-on-one with Steven Phillips, coordinator of transfer admissions, to ask questions, review academic records and the application process.

John Iacovelli, dean of enrollment management, explained, "This is an opportunity to research the admissions process in a more personal way and receive sound academic advice at the same time from an academic advisor. We want to offer a one-stop academic shopping experience."

Students should bring updated college transcripts.

Cynthia McCloskey, assistant director of Academic Advising, will also be present to answer questions and offer guidance to students.

Stockton's Manahawkin Instructional Site, which opened in September 2012, provides a convenient location to students in Ocean County and the surrounding area. To learn more, visit www.stockton.edu/manahawkin.
