

'A Time for Change' Exhibit on South Jersey Civil Rights Movement Moving to Stockton

History Project to be on Display at Galloway Campus Oct. 4-Dec. 15

For Immediate Release; with photos on flickr

Friday, September 30, 2016

Contact: Maryjane Briant
News and Media

-continued from page 1-

The exhibition, which was previously at the African American Heritage Museum of Southern New Jersey in the Arts Garage in Atlantic City, is sponsored by Stockton University and the New Jersey Council for the Humanities.

John O'Hara, associate professor of Critical Thinking and First Year Studies at Stockton, headed the project, working with graduate students.

"The title of this exhibition, 'A Time for Change,' evokes the situations and conditions of change in the 1960s, but in looking at the 1964 Democratic National Convention protests, de facto segregation, race and police violence, and urban unrest, it also evokes the present," he said. "Many of the moments on which we focus are not so distant after all, and we invite visitors to reflect on the nature and meaning of civil rights change."

#