Lori Vermeulen Hosts Appreciation Party for The Provost Painters

Provost Lori Vermeulen recently held a staff appreciation paint party at Kramer Hall, Stockton's location in Hammonton, where she and 15 staff members painted a beach lighthouse scene.

Vermeulen opted to host an activity for her staff rather than a holiday party during the hustle and bustle of the winter season.

"The activity provided an opportunity for us to spend some time together with no agenda, a chance to get to know each other as people," she said. "It was my 'thank you' to those who work so hard for the Provost's Office all year long. We all have challenging jobs at the University and finding balance is important for everyone's wellbeing."

"A group from the office brainstormed a bit and we all liked the idea of a paint party," said Jeannine Arrigo, of the Provost's Office. "I had been to one elsewhere and enjoyed it, so we decided to look into it. In the meantime, Kramer Hall was scheduling a paint party for one of their Third Thursday community those to 11 0 0560052002 to you' ton @05Thursday

Financial Aid Staff Dress as Mount Rushmore for Presidents Day

“Hello. I’m George and today is my birthday,” said Jenifer Robin, technical assistant, as she greeted a student on Presidents Day.

Staff members in the Office of Financial Aid dressed in Mount Rushmore National Memorial fashion to celebrate the holiday on Feb. 20.

To complete the facade of Mount Rushmore, Nancy Martorano, assistant director of Financial Aid, dressed as Thomas Jefferson; Kathy Waldron, senior clerk typist, dressed as Teddy Roosevelt; and Angie Velez, assistant director of Financial Aid, dressed as Abraham Lincoln.

The presidential foursome took the opportunity to liven up their office during these last few days in February as they remind students and parents to complete the FAFSA form, which is due by March 1.

University Relations & Marketing Request: Submit Your Themed Programming Events

The Office of University Relations & Marketing requests submissions for events organized around monthly and/or themed awareness initiatives.

These events will be grouped and featured on Stockton’s homepage. Currently featured are the University’s events celebrating Black History Month.

Submit any additional themed events, and events celebrating Women’s History Month in March, to StocktonTimes@stockton.edu.

Please include the time, date and location for each event, as well as any relevant websites associated with the program.
