Barbara Fisher, an Honors Physics student, credits Stockton faculty and staff with helping her win a J. William Fulbright U.S. Student scholarship.

Fisher, who graduates in May, will be an English teaching assistant in the Czech Republic in the 2013-14 academic year.

"The Stockton College community is very pleased that Barbara Fisher's hard work has been recognized by the Fulbright program," said President Herman J. Saatkamp. "We congratulate her and extend our thanks to her faculty advisors, who helped Ms. Fisher achieve her ambitious goal."

"This is extremely exciting news, and I am not aware of any previous Stockton student who has received a Fulbright," said Dr. Harvey Kesselman, provost and executive vice president of the college.

Honor Physics student Barbara Fisher was awarded a J. William Fulbright U.S. Student scholarship.

"From the moment I learned about the Fulbright Commission, I knew this was an opportunity I could not let pass me by," said Fisher, a 22-year-old Westville, NJ resident. "I would not be a scholar without the incredible support of my Fulbright Campus Advisor, Honors Program, Physics Department, Service Learning Department, Grants Office and the amazing people I call my friends and family."

"This opportunity will help me to reach my ultimate dream of becoming an international citizen, researcher and most importantly, a teacher," Fisher added. "I could not be happier."

"I really want to also thank all of my teachers who have inspired me as well, because it really has been everyone who made me who I am today," she said.

History Professor Robert Nichols, the Fulbright Program advisor for Stockton, "guided me though the process", Fisher said, while Professor Lisa Rosner, director of the Honors program, "has always seen my potential, even when I could not." She also credited Associate Professor Fang Liu, the head of the Physics Department, as her mentor and advisor, and Professor Yitzhak Sharon, senior Physics professor, with encouraging her not to give up.
