Lauren Del Rossi Featured in Pediatric Physical Therapy Journal

Lauren Del Rossi, assistant professor of Physical Therapy, recently published a case report, "Gross Motor Function of a Child With Antley-Bixler Syndrome," in the winter edition of Pediatric Physical Therapy.

"I took advantage of some of the digital opportunities to increase the impact of my article. I was interviewed by the journal podcast and I created a digital abstract," Del Rossi said. Her podcast interview is available under Volume 27, Issue 4, Winter 2015 and starts at 7 minutes, 30 seconds.

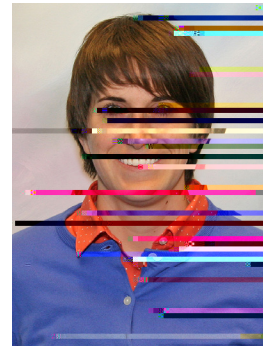

ABS is primarily an exceptionally rare genetic disorder of cartilaginous and skeletal abnormalities, explained Del Rossi.

In the case report, Del Rossi described her treatment of a female patient with ABS, over the first three years of life.

"When I first encountered this patient, I struggled to find guidance within the literature for clinical reasoning within physical therapy and this work is significant because to my knowledge, it's the first of its kind to focus on rehabilitation of a patient with ABS," Del Rossi explained during her digital abstract.

Del Rossi acknowledged the support of Stockton's Physical Therapy team.

"A huge thank you to everyone that helped me along the way," Del Rossi said. "My colleagues spent a lot of time reading some really rough drafts, patiently listening, editing and keeping me focused. I could not have done it without them."
