

Volume 17

Stockton faculty, staff and students volunteered in more than 40 community projects during the college's 10th Annual Martin Luther King, Jr. Day of Service.

Daniel Tomé, assistant director of Service-Learning, estimated that more than 800 volunteers participated in the day's events.

"We were excited to work with the greater South Jersey community as Stockton College celebrated its 10th year of service and engagement in hosting this national service initiative," Tomé said.

Special points of interest:

- MLK Day of Service Includes 40 Projects in Three Counties
- SCCSA, Gero Programs Receive National Visibility
- Stockton to Host IELTS Intensive English Site Later This Year
- College to 'Go Red for Women,' Fighting Heart Disease, Stroke
- Dr. Boakes to Give Global Education Workshop in South Korea

